FAQ's Regarding the Affidavit of Property Value

The Affidavit of Property Value is an important document when it comes to determining full cash/market values for property tax purposes. Over the course of time, changes to that document have been made to assist in providing information regarding the specifics about a sale of property.

As changes to the document have occurred and people move in and out of the real estate and escrow industry, questions arise regarding how to fill out the form. As with many issues, there are some frequently asked questions... CLICK HERE to read more

The Dream is Almost a Reality

"Pssst! Have you heard the rumors? The talk is that soon the ASEA will be doing their professional designation testing online!"

"Whaaaa? That old story again? They've been saying that for years and nuthin has happened so far. I'll believe it when I see it!"

Tip Of The Month October 2014

Did You Know That...

Just as a Power of Attorney doesn't survive death, neither does a Social Security Number? It might interest you to know that if the person signing your documents is signing as either the Personal Representative of an estate, or as the Successor Trustee of a Trust, they should not use the social security number of the deceased to complete the...
